the perfect freedom of commerce. They did not wish to ask for any restrictions, and thought the question as to the passage of men-of-war might fairly be left for the Conference.

"The arrangement should certainly be such as to render it impossible for any power to close the straits. They desired the vote so that any reasonable claims of England might not be disregarded by the conference, but they had no desire to arrogate the settlement to themselves, and repudiated a desire to cripple the development of the Christian races."

Mr. Gladstone, while approving the declaration as to the policy of the Government, still considered it indefinite. He did not see that it showed a necessity for the vote.

Mr. Henry Faweett, Liberal, censured the course of Lord Hartington in relinquishing opposition.

The Tames, in its leading editorial article, ys that it does not share in the excitement and arm which yesterday's news created in many earters, but thinks the time has come when e whole responsibility of action ought to it thrown on the Government, and a generous apport be accorded it if the legitimate interests the country are to be protected. It says: The overnment may have to act, and to act promptate. It is impossible for the opposition to act for sem or take their places, and it ought now to e left to them to take the course they deem eccessary on their responsibility. It is vident this was the feeling yesterday dithe more independent Liberal meaners; and there can be no question twill be the general feeling of the country. It is for Russla to restore confidence by abandoning the pealous reserve she has hitherto maintained. When we know what she means and what she claims we may be able to say what should be done. But, meanwhile, the Government can alone be in a position to judge what the necessities of the moment and the interests of the country demand; and it is to be hoped that the division of last night will close the counter, which however, properly raised at the outset, is now wholly out of place."

Nervousness of the Visiting Statesmen over Gen. Anderson's Conviction. men who superintended the counting in of the Hayes electors by the Louisiana Returning Board are beginning to feel nervous. They find that public opinion is gradually growing stronger and stronger, and they apprehend that Secretary, made a statement similar to that of Sir Stafford Northcote in the House of Commons. He said he was justified in his resignation when the fleet was first sent to Constantinopic, but he approved the present action in consequence of the altered aspect of affairs.

The summary of the terms of the armistice, communicated by Sir Stafford Northcote to the House of Commons this afternoon, is given in a despatch from Mr. Layard, dated Feb. 7. In November last, they say, the complainant called at his offee looking for work as a copyist, and they aver that after she had finished the work that was given her she called on Mr. Stiwell and begged for small loans to keep her from want. Mr. Stiwell, being moved by her evident distress and friendlessness, advanced money at different times sufficient to keep her from actual suffering, but when her demands became threatening and she hinted of damaging facts in reserve, he was aroused to a sense of his peril. Then he ceased his payments and Miss Morgan went to his offee and created a scene. On Monday last she repeated the experiment for the third time, and Mr. Stilwells patience being exhausted he gently led her to the door and phased her outside of it.

TING IN OF LIGHT.

Expected to Do-The Legislature's Work Yesterday-Mr. Robertson's Insurance Bill. ALBANY, Feb. 8.—There is consternation, and cursing both loud and deep, among the extensively published, in which Mr. Murray confessed that he divided $150,000 of the $250,and cursing both loud and deep, among the members of the Insurance Ring at the prospects that their dark ways are to be brought to light, for it is now openly admitted, even by the Superintendent himself, that examinations of insurance companies have been made and the bills Machado, and himself, his own share being intendent himself, that examinations of insurance companies have been made and the bills therefor paid without having first been audited and approved by the Comptroller, as required by the law of 1873. But this course it is attempted to justify by the Superintendent on the ground that that law was unconstitutional, and that its workings would embarrass the department, as there was no way provided by which the money paid into the treasury for such examinations could be obtained to carry on the work of the department. To sustain them in this, as was intimated in The Sun of to-day, Mr. Smyth has obtained the written opinion of what he calls eminent counsel and exparte orders of a Judge, to the effect that bills for such examinations could be paid without their first having been presented to the Comptroller. Thus it will be seen that Mr. Smyth and his "eminent counsel" have constituted themselves a court to pass upon the question of the constitutionality of a law, as well as his official powers and duties. And not the least singular part of this transaction is that this they have done without even deigning.

The Machado, and himself, his own share being $37,500, Mr. Nobles testified to having received the Murray letter from his brother, Col. Nobles, one of the parties to the Bades, Nobles, and Garrison claim; that his brother said, when delivering the letter, that he had been compelled to consent to the fraud to the desired the document should be used to und the wire least illness, and shortly before his dealth.
